Digital Descriptor Systems, Inc. Subsidiary Announces New European Distribution Channel For Security Products

For Immediate Release

SEA GIRT, N.J./EWorldWire/July 8, 2005 --- Digital Descriptor Systems, Inc. (DDSI) (DDSI.PK), an industry leader that develops products for Homeland Security, including supply chain and criminal justice markets, today announced the latest addition to its global distribution network, CGM Europe, Ltd. CGM Europe Ltd, as DDSI's partner in Europe, will market, sell and support the whole range of security products and services provided by CGM Applied Security Technologies, a subsidiary of DDSI. It will be a full-line stocking distributor with coverage throughout the European Union with headquarters in Dublin, Ireland.

"We are very excited to have CGM Europe, Ltd. and its highly experienced European Network join our growing global distribution channel," stated Anthony Shupin, CEO of DDSI.

CGM manufactures security products that seal and lock cargo, sea containers and trailers while they are unattended in the supply chain. Control of unattended assets is of paramount importance in moving any company's products or in any country's infrastructure Homeland Security plan. "We believe that our TS4A truck and tractor air brake lock and other security sealing systems provide an immediate and proven benefit helping to prevent terrorist abduction or tampering in supply chain transportation," added Erik Hoffer, President of CGM AST.

John Dempsey, Managing Director for CGM Europe, Ltd, remarked that his European clients will benefit from the direct availability of CGM security products. "The wide array of seals and airbrake locks allow us to integrate a threat specific, customized security solution for our supply chain clients," said Dempsey.
