Suzanna Ramos, a Singapore researcher in creativity, shares her insightful story on the discovery of The Most Creative Man in the World.

For Immediate Release

MONTGOMERY, Ala./EWORLDWIRE/Feb. 6, 2006 --- The International Academy of Genius for the first time reveals the story behind the breakthrough discovery of The Most Creative Man in the World, as told by a talented young researcher, Suzanna Ramos from Singapore.

Below are excerpts of Ramos' article.

"My long search for the most powerful methods of increasing creativity surfaced a nagging question in my mind, Is there such a person who would be literally considered the most creative mind in the world? When an Internet search led me to the most creative man in Silicon Valley, I found that expression was used metaphorically. And then it clicked...Aha."

"The person that fits the bill happens to be someone that I have seen many times in action saving geniuses in Singapore. It's Dr. Andrei Aleinikov, the discoverer of MegaCreativity and the author of the bestseller on MegaCreativity. He teaches how to generate 1,000,000 times more ideas per minute than an ordinary person. That is really the most creative man in the world."

"Dr. Aleinikov who was called 'the MegaCreativity Man' (by Dr. E. Paul Torrance) and 'the world's leading expert on MegaCreativity' (by Dr. K. Neethling) actually must be titled 'The Most Creative Man in the World.' He found the path to incredible growth of creativity and is the discoverer of the new continent of unlimited creativity."
