Dr. Andrei Aleinikov, the designer of Genius Education Methodology always believed the earlier the better. Now there is a perfect Pre-K example for 140 lucky future geniuses.

For Immediate Release

MONTGOMERY, Ala./EWORLDWIRE/Feb. 7, 2006 --- Dr. Andrei Aleinikov, "The Most Creative Man in the World" and the designer of Genius Education Methodology (GEM), visited his brain child, The Little Genius Academy of Metuchen, which was created and is maintained by Rose Holdren and her sister, Angela Holdren.

Four years ago, when Rose shared her dream of creating a unique day care center with Dr. Aleinikov, she could not even imagine where his ideas would lead her.

Despite numerous doubts for using the word 'genius' in the school name, her Little Genius Academy launched very successfully and, according to the local Chamber of Commerce, was filled in record time, three months. Intelligent parents quickly grasped the idea and appreciated it. They enjoyed seeing their kids solving problems in the Einstein's Auditorium, listening to music in the Mozart's Melody Den and playing with toys in the Madam Curie's Corner. The media reported a newcomer making a difference in education, even The China Press published a praising article on the new Center using Genius Education Methodology.

Therefore, now Genius Education Methodology has proven to work well with the youngest possible age, from several weeks to five years old, as well as older children starting from age eight.

It takes a genius level entrepreneur, like Rose, to get through the hardships of financing, designing, constructing, marketing and running it all. But one happy smile of a child or one positive comment from a parent makes it worth trying, even more so with 140 children smiling all day long.
