Journalist With Real-World Experience

For Immediate Release

SUCCASUNNA, N.J./EWORLDWIRE/Dec. 5, 2006 --- With 15 credits to go, Montclair State University senior and River Edge, N.J. resident Oriana D'Agostino, is currently spending several days a week of her fall semester getting hands-on experience in the news industry, immersed in an internship at World Internet Marketing, Inc. corporate offices in Succasunna.

An English major just three credits away from her journalism minor, D'Agostino is passionate about pursuing a future career as an international journalist. D'Agostino assists in determining press release distribution channels, writing and copy editing press-releases, preparing vital written copy for broadcast and broadcasting energy-charged releases on the global newswire, Eworldwire.com (www.eworldwire.com).

D'Agostino's aims to master the art of press-release writing and broadcasting newsworthy information, elevating her skills and sophistication. She is also currently offering marketing strategies to the company as she has the phenomenal experience of creating a layout for her very own news-based commuter magazine. According to D'Agostino, the internship that she is in love with has already prepared her for the relentless follow-through and interviews that she will be conducting as a future news-reporter - her experience offers distinct learning opportunities, putting her in direct contact with clients and media while she hones her communication skills when interviewing clients in the highly professional setting that Eworldwire offers.

During her initial interview with company co-owner Nick Pappas, D'Agostino spoke ardently about her love for working with public, writing the news and being the face in front of the camera. "Go to the camera now!" he exclaimed, and after D'Agostino did a test broadcast about "The House of Gianni," she has been even more addicted to the news since then.

D'Agostino says, "This internship has truly cemented what I've already believed - that motivation must come from within and a positive attitude must constantly be manifested in order for one to truly achieve a successful destiny. I've selected journalism, and I feel excellently equipped to make my mark in the news industry - as my drive has only been fostered by the professionals of this fast-paced and expanding company."

She also said, "I am very lucky to have been chosen for this internship. I certainly am a more marketable candidate for future journalism pursuits - along with my infectious high energy, I am in a stronger position than other students who have not had such a quality internship."

Outside of the internship D'Agostino has written countless front page news stories for MSU's The Montclairion: articles concentrating on finance, attempted sexual assault, entertainment and robbery. She enjoys tracking down sources, learning new languages as she is currently almost finished learning Farsi, while she also maintains an interest in the fashion industry. She also loves the elderly and conducts motivational classes for them in an eldercare facility. Her greatest loves will always be travel and writing.
