

Morning Sickness Abatement and Maternity Fashion That's Not Frumpy, Available at Fertile Mind

Fertile Mind has found a natural product for their customers who regularly experience morning sickness and discovered Micro-fibre Maternity Tights are even more versatile.

For Immediate Release

SEAFORTH, NSW/EWORLDWIRE/May 9, 2007 --- Ginger has a long history of helping to relieve the nausea associated with morning sickness, so Fertile Mind teamed up with Buderim Ginger to provide its new Ginger Bears (like Gummy Bears but with fresh ginger - anti-nausea sweets). These will be a big hit with pregnant women feeling under the weather. An economical choose sold in 50g packet, the Ginger Bears contains 6 percent fresh ginger but no artificial colourings or flavourings.

According to the Buderim Ginger Web site, scientific research to test the validity of medicinal claims made about ginger shows exciting results, including control of nausea and vomiting. The Web site quotes from Research Herbalist Paul Schulick's book - "Common Spice or Wonder Drug? Ginger" (1993, Herbal Free Press, Brattleboro, Vermont, USA).

Winter winners - opaque maternity tights

Soft and comfortable, the Fertile Mind Micro-fibre super-stretch maternity tights are the most versatile on the market. With cotton gusset and lovely microfibre feel, tights of this quality are usually expensive, but the Fertile Mind ones are very affordable enough to buy two pairs. Leave one pair as they are and cut off the feet of the other pair to make maternity footless tights. The tights don't fray, and they are a great way to instantly update a wardrobe. Size one fits most and available in black only.
