

IT Symposium Rescheduled For Early Q2 2009, Announces Newry

For Immediate Release

CLEVELAND/EWORLDWIRE/Sep. 24, 2008 --- Newry Corporation's 2008 Symposium entitled, "Expanding IT's Role in Delivering Growth," originally scheduled for September 2008 in Chicago, Illinois, has been rescheduled to early Q2 2009 due to extenuating circumstances. The new Symposium will cover the same essential IT Strategy topics, along with showcasing how to actually create a return using a company's IT infrastructure.

The Symposium is organized by Newry Corp. and receives support from both industry leaders and Academia. Attendance will be open to the public, but registration is required.

Corporations Eager for Advances in Effectiveness of IT Departments

CIOs today are burdened with the premise that their departments are looked upon as extra money that does not need to be wasted by an organization. They are now a commoditized section of the company. Newry Corporation wants to show CIOs how to break away from the existing stigma. With the help of Nick Bush and Matt Mehlbrech, attendees will leave this seminar with new insights and solutions on how to bring a department to the forefront of the organization.
