COOP Consulting Announces Spring COOP Certified Course Schedule

For Immediate Release

RESTON, Va./EWORLDWIRE/Jan. 8, 2004 --- COOP Consulting (<http://www.coop-consulting.com>) today announced its public schedule for its Spring series of certified Continuity of Operations training courses in the DC area, starting on February 2nd. Since the start of its training series in mid-2002, done in conjunction with DRI International (www.drii.org), students have been taught from more than a dozen federal agencies and states, including large-scale programs with two early responder agencies.

COOP Consulting's training, delivered in both private and public venues by certified trainers, has three formats for clients:

- * The basic curriculum is done in four parts, each 2 1/2 days, and is focused on inexperienced planners.
- * An advanced program covers the same material for professionals with experience and takes a week.
- * An exam preparation course, lasting a total of 2 1/2 days, is geared for experienced continuity planners.

All three curriculums end with a certification test, which enables participants to join the world-wide body of certified continuity planning professionals, as administered by the DRI International.

"We have become the preeminent supplier of certified COOP training programs to the government. Especially gratifying has been the large number of agencies taught, the repeat business by many agencies and the high grades we receive for teaching," said Chris Alvord, CEO of COOP Consulting. "It speaks to the quality of the courses at a time when agencies are trying to improve their COOP planning process."
